Police Court.

Tom Ogdon was fined ten dollars and costs for drawing a gun on C. M. Griffin.

We can't censure Tom much, and had the gun accidentally went off while pointed toward said Griffin, the world would not have suffered much. Griffin seems to have been a little sporty with Tom's wife. She is a young thing. She is long on looks but short on housekeeping and motherly qualities.

We incline to the opinion that she is not worth fussing over. She seems inclined to go to the devil and whenever a woman is inclined that way there are always Grifflins to help her along on the road. Poor foolish woman! What can she see in the life she seems determined to lead. Tom Ogdon furnished her a good home and provided well for her comfort. Tom had two bright little motherless children that would appeal to the heart of any true woman. She has neglected these children till they elicited the sympathy of the neighborhood. Tom stuck to the woman in spite of this and did the part of a true husband.

Now she forgets her solemn vows as wife and violates the sacred mother instinct. Is there no power on earth to check this deluded woman in her downward course, and lead her to see things as they are.

Can't some of our Christian women who are devoting a large share of their time to saving the heathen in foreign lands, devote a little of their time and money to cases like this to good advantage?
We wonder!

How Mrs. Spider Cleans House.

Like all housekeepers, Mrs. Spider has her cleaning day, but, unlike other cheerful housekeepers, she wears her blue clothes when she works.

Maybe you have seen her all rigged out in her yellow and black velvet gown, sweeping and dusting her web, but just remember she is not as extravagant as she seems. Clothes never bother her. She doesn't have to go to a dressmaker's when she needs a new gown. She has only to step out of her old, and, lo, just under it is a fresh one all ready made, and a perfect fit.

No, Mrs. Spider is not extravagant. She is very economical, in fact; for, instead of throwing aside her old dresses, she rolls them into a ball and eats them.

There are no old-clothes men in the spider world.

Well, to tell about Mrs. Spider's housecleaning, she has neither brushes nor brooms nor dusters, so she begins her work by raising one of her eight claws and giving her house a shake which reaches to every corner. She is careful however, not to injure it, but she makes the dust fly. When this is done to her satisfaction she looks her web over, first from the top, then from the bottom, and then from both sides. If the walls sag, or are the least bit broken, she rolls them into a ball and eats them, just as she does her old clothes. Then she replaces them by new ones.

When everything is in thorough order she sits down for a rest, and to make her own toilet.

As her whole body and legs have a rough, hairy covering, she needs quite a little time to fix herself properly.

In her mandibles, or jaws, are the teeth with which she combs her hair, and her claws serve as brushes for the other parts of her body.

After a careful dressing she is ready for dinner, and woe to the fly or other luckless insect which is caught in her web!

She spends much of her time eating, and all her food goes into the back part of her body, which, you know, looks just like a soft round ball. Here it is changed into a thick syrup. That is the material of which her web is made. It is forced through her spinners, the tiny knobs at the back of her body, and hardens into a thread when it comes in contact with the air.

As the web is in constant need of repairing, a great deal of material is required, and Mrs. Spider must eat much and often.

She will neither make nor mend her web in cloudy weather—Wesleyan Advocate.

Dead.

B. H. Killion of this city, for many years a resident of Wilson county, died at the home of his brother in Gallatin, Mo., last Saturday afternoon. Mr. Killion had gone to visit his brother and had been absent from here about a week. He had been around all the time and was not supposed to be suffering from any particular disease.

Saturday afternoon he complained of the heat and went into the house and laid down. He soon seemed to drop into a natural sleep.

Members of his brother's family noticed this and did not disturb him till some one went into the room to call him to supper and he was found to be dead.

The remains were brought to Chautau Sunday. Mr. Killion leaves a widow and four grown daughters.

Mr. Killion was an old soldier. He served his country well both in war and peace, for he has ever been a good citizen and respected neighbor.

Mr. Killion did not seem a very old man nor a feeble one and his sudden and very unexpected death is a shock to the community.

Dodging Duty.

Some folks say it is my duty, for the Peerless one to vote; if he isn't chosen captain, our ship won't stay afloat; but a chap gets tired of voting for the man without a peer; I can always vote for Bryan, so I'll vote for Taft this year. Change is sometimes necessary, if this life we would enjoy, and, although our sweetest boon is voting for the Peerless Boy, yet some little variation makes the landscape seem less drear; I can always vote for Bryan, so I'll vote for Taft this year. Even though our children's children hand their heads in deepest shame, blushing for their rude forefathers who at one time jumped the game—who in gloomy desperation voted down the peerless dear; we can vote for Bryan always, so we'll vote for Taft this year.—Emporia Gazette.

Married.

Miss Ellen Wilson and Mr. Carl B. McLean were married in Coffeyville at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Wilson, last Saturday morning.

The young couple will live with Mrs. Sue M. Henry for the present. The groom is an employee of the Ash Grove Cement Co.

Be Cheerful!

In the plan of creation it is recorded that the human was the last of the animals to be brought into existence. The divine Creator is said to have viewed the different phases of the evolution from chaos to light and life, and determining that it had been beautifully and satisfactorily completed, created man. Even if only allegorically true, yet the scheme of the creation of the world, as given in the Bible, is so wonderfully conceptive of a divine love and tender consideration by which an infinite Being devised the happiness, comfort, and perpetuation of him who was to be a "reflection of His own image" that the genesis of human life is sanctified by the environment in which it first began; especially so since it appears that it was only after everything essential for the well-being of man had been prepared and laws made for the natural government of this work that the flashing touch was to be emphasized by bringing into existence a being into whose keeping and by whose superior will and reason—attributes mysteriously withheld from the other animals—the world has to be controlled and directed. It would seem, therefore, that man, then and ever afterwards, should have been grateful for this exhibition of care and should have been supremely happy and contented. Where so much is bestowed it is not expecting too much, according to a human estimate of appreciation and gratitude, that at least an acknowledgment should be shown by a cheerful spirit through all phases of living.

Cheerfulness is an attribute of the mind as well as of the heart, and is inherited as well as acquired. Like mercy, it thrice blesses him who gives as well as him who receives. It is an outward expression of a contentment and happiness within, and it is also a reflection of a humble spirit and of a disposition which thinketh no evil.

Cheerful people are generally healthy people, and therefore cheerfulness must be classed among the virtues which should be cultivated for its hygienic and sanitary influence on men and women.

Compare a bright, sunny disposition with one of a morose and sour kind, and in whose company would you prefer to be placed, aside from esthetic considerations? There can be but one answer, and the man or woman who carries in his or her countenance a contentment and an appreciation of the millions of blessings which each day come to him or her is the individual whose company is sought after and who is always a welcome visitor. See a man or a woman who, as Kipling says, wears a smile which goes around their faces two times, and ninety-nine times out of a hundred cases you will find their digestion good, sleep tranquil, brain clear and well balanced, and, in fact, every organ of the body working harmoniously and normally.

Doubtless it is this quality of mind which is trained to view every aspect of living in its most pleasing attraction that has given impetus to a class which claim a command over the ill of life without resort to medication or drug therapeutics. A happy frame of mind, contentment in every sphere of life in which placed, and a determined purpose to make the best of every situation, will oftentimes influence the several organs of the body to perform their functions, normally and in accord, that in a general way the human system may be kept in perfect trim.

Suggestive therapeutics has its initiative and growth in the will power of the individual, and cheerfulness is a feature most prominent in such a condition.

Cheerfulness is catching. The presence of a cheerful person in a household is wonderfully contributive to the happiness of all the other members. The hygienic influence of such a person cannot be too highly prized, for it has its impress which is felt day by day, and in brightening other lives it has an instructive impression on the individual himself or herself. The character of cheerful persons is enriched by the unconscious giving of their nature to assist others and to make them happier, for by constantly minimizing one's own troubles in an effort to raise the physical tone of another there will be a beautifying of our own individuality and character which will make each one of us less selfish and more generous in thought and act. A cheery spirit is like a ray of light, penetrates the minutest crack, brightens the darkness of gloom and despair and lifts a sorrow, for—
"When a bit of sunshine hits ye,
After passing of a cloud;
When a fit of laughter gets ye,
And 'yer spine is feelin' proud,
Don't forget to up and sing it
At a soul that's feelin' blue.
For the minute that ye sing it
It's a boomerang to you."
Be cheerful!—From Florida Health Notes.

Market Report.

Kansas City, Mo. August 24, 1908.
Cattle receipts last week were a little larger than in recent weeks, but were still short of the normal supply for this season of the year. The market made a small advance on grass cattle, but medium grade of fed steers lost 10 to 15 cents. Buyers claim the grass steers are killing out better each week, and cost less money relatively than medium fed steers. Owners have been holding their cattle back partly because of good pastures, and the impression prevails that we shall have heavy supplies during September and October. Some traders also believe that demand for feeders will not be as heavy this fall as in recent years of good corn crops, account of the prospects of the high price at which corn will sell. There are the pessimistic views of the situation, and do not coincide with the judgment of many owners, who hope for a better market later in the season. Run is 21,000 head today, including 2500 calves, market low to a shade lower on steers, but strong on other grades. Nothing very high class is here today, but top steers have sold at $6.75 to $7.25 during the last week, grass westerns worth $4.25 to $5.10 with a few heavy steers above this, grass cows $2.80 to $3.60, bulls $2.25 to $3.50, calves $3.50 to $6.25. About 450 car loads of stockers and feeders went to the country last week, and averaged steady for the week, stockers at $2.80 to $4.25, feeders $3.60 to $4.75, a few choice stockers at $5.10 and feeders up to $5.15. Market on country kinds is strong today.

Hog receipts fell off last week, but buyers managed to keep the market down, except for a bulge first of the week. Run is 5000 here today, market steady with the close of last week, top $6.70, bulk $6.25 to $6.50, indicating a large proportion of the inferior hogs. Provisions have been selling unsatisfactorily, off 50 cents to $1.00 last week, a strong bear argument. Pigs are bad sellers, $3.75 to $5.25. Present prices are 30 to 50 cents above a year ago at this time.

Sheep supplies are running ahead of August last year, and the market is just about holding steady, with a good many fluctuations. Run is 8500 today, sheep steady, lambs weak, lambs at $5.25 to $5.75, not quite the full test of the market, yearlings worth up to $4.50, wethers $4.25, ewes $4.00. There is quite a demand for stock grades, at $3.25 to $4.00, with a few choice breeding ewes lately at $4.50.

A New England man, who flatters himself upon his aptness in saying the proper thing at the proper time, recently revisited his old home in Vermont, whither he had not gone in ten years or more. Among those he met during the first day of his visit was a coquettish splasher, who, with a simper, said: "I'm Miss Mullins, you don't remember me, of course." "Remember you!" exclaimed the New Englander. "As if I could help doing so, Miss Mullins! Why, you are one of the landmarks of the town!"—The Outlook.
